

Some Election Comments

Years of Peace.

There will be two years more of good government in South Carolina. The vote in the second primary was close, it is true, and it reveals the prodigious work of the supporters of the policies of the administration of Richard I. Manning.

On the evening before the polls closed, the Record pledged itself to support the nominee, whoever might have the fortune of the day. We are proud that the victory comes to the man whom we have supported throughout his administration.

The people of South Carolina love fair play. We submit that Mr. Manning has not been given the opportunity to show clearly and fully his feeling for the people and his appreciation of the conditions of life under which they strive.

We appeal for him to be given the sympathy and encouragement of all the people of the State in his next two years of public service, and his partly finished work of the last two will then be revealed in its sincerity and wisdom.—Columbia Record.

The Election Result.

The Journal has been confident since the opening of the State campaign that the people of South Carolina were going to give Governor Richard I. Manning a second term. We have been surprised and disappointed that their endorsement of him was not even more emphatic. We believed during the campaign that an overwhelming majority of the people were with him. While we slightly miscalculated public sentiment, yet it is encouraging to know that the majority endorse the splendid administration he has given us.—Spartanburg Journal.

Manning, Governor.

We sincerely believe that the people of South Carolina have made no mistake in electing to a second term to be governor Richard I. Manning. Abused, slandered, hooted and howled at, he did not once descend to the low plane of a mere scrambler for office. He, being reviled, reviled not again. Harshly judged by the very citizens who had been most benefited by his administration, patiently, without flourish of trumpets, without brag and bluster, he went through the campaign and showed himself to be a Christian and a gentleman. He did not stop to explain where most misunderstood and most deliberately misjudged. He has proven himself to be worthy of reelection, not only in the administration of the laws of the State, but in his conduct upon the campaign just closed.

Of course the cry will be raised: "Manning bought the election," "Manning stole the election," "Manning is the friend of corporations," and many other equally false and malicious slanders. But it matters not one whit. He is elected. He has and will make a good governor. His life, public and private, is above reproach. More and more this will become known to all the people of South Carolina.—Union Times.

Governor Manning Renominated.

The renomination of Governor Manning for a second term and the rejection of Cole L. Blease for a third term by a substantial majority, which never wavered and left no doubt of the result from the earliest returns, was a good day's work done by the people of South Carolina for themselves immediately and for their State both now and to the future.

The issue of the election was clearly and sharply defined and upon it the people voted with discrimination and an earnestness that is encouraging and refreshing. The cause of law and constitutional government, of peace and toleration was established over factionalism and personal government.

There has been enough of political contention and bitter contest to last a long time and a store upon which doubtless there will be large drafts made in future campaigns. For the present it is sufficient to reflect that the people have shown understanding of fundamental things, have chosen wisely and well and to feel that the State is on the way forward and upward. For the rest, it is a time to forget the rancors of the recent past, to put politics aside and to seek ways of working together—men of all factions and opinions—for the common welfare, in peace and good will.—Charleston Post.

Won Great Victory.

It will have to be admitted that the Manningtons have won a great victory. Although the Enquirer never makes predictions as to what is going to happen in politics, we do not mind saying that in view of the circumstances the outcome of Tuesday's second primary was a surprise. There was no good reason to believe that all of the Cooper vote would go to Blease, but there did appear to be good reason to believe that enough of it would go to him to give him at

MANNING TO THE PEOPLE.

Voters Will Stand True in Crisis, Says Governor.

To the People of South Carolina:

Our victory is a victory for the constitution and for law and order. At such a time a sense of profound gratitude to Almighty God fills our hearts. The principles that were at stake in this election stirred our people to their foundation. Without consideration of personal preference, the law abiding men and women of South Carolina rallied to the cause, in the face of a lead which was tremendous, and fought for the principles they knew were right and the homes they love. The result is victory of the people in support of the constitution and in the enforcement of law. It once more proves that when the people of South Carolina are brought face to face with a crisis which they see and understand and which involves the fundamentals of our liberty, they choose the right course and stand true to South Carolina.

We must now see that bitterness and strife are allayed and as citizens of one State and as brethren in a common cause, we must unite in the great work of upbuilding South Carolina and in making higher and better the character of her citizenship. To this work I pledged myself in the campaign of 1914. I have given this work my best efforts during my administration. I made the fight this summer for reelection for the principles for which I had fought and in which I believe. These principles and that work have been endorsed by the people of South Carolina and I again consecrate myself with all the energy that I possess to carry them forward.

To my friends, to the men and women all over South Carolina, I extend my profound gratitude and thanks. Without regard to personal preference or the sacrifices involved and with an eye single to the interest of South Carolina, believing that the cause for which I fought was their cause, they have performed a splendid work and one which will be remembered throughout the history of South Carolina. I wish to say to each of them how deeply I appreciate their work and their words of cheer and congratulations and to assure them that with such men and women working for the good of South Carolina, her future is safe.

To those honest and conscientious citizens who, not realizing the importance of the principles for which I stand, did not favor my reelection, I appeal for a clearer understanding, and ask their sympathetic support of my administration for the ensuing two years. RICHARD I. MANNING.

Gov. Manning in his address from the State house steps Tuesday night said:

"The returns indicate a victory for the constitution and law. At such a time a sense of profound gratitude to Almighty God fills our hearts. I have never seen a time when the people of South Carolina were more stirred over an election. It is a victory of the people in support of the constitution and the enforcement of law. It shows that when the people realize their duty and when a real danger, a crisis confronts them, they meet it as true patriots and settle it right. Splendid work has been done by the citizens and their work has been rewarded by success. If this victory is assured, and I believe it is assured, we must see that bitterness and strife are subdued and allayed and that we must all as citizens of one State and as brethren in a common cause unite in the great work of upbuilding our State and in making higher and better the character of our citizens.

"I consecrate myself anew to this great work and pledge myself to your service."

She Knew.

"Say, Reed," said Higgins, as he met a friend, "do you know why you are like a donkey?"

"Like a donkey?" echoed Reed, thoughtfully. "No, I don't."

"Because your better half is stubbornness itself," said Higgins.

"That's not bad," said Reed, "I'll have to try that on my wife when I get home tonight."

Accordingly, when they were at dinner, Reed asked:

"Annie, do you know why I am so much like a donkey?"

He waited a moment, expecting Mrs. Reed would give it up. But, on the contrary, she gazed at him somewhat commiseratingly as she replied:

"I suppose because you were born so."—Knoxville Journal and Tribune.

least a small majority. However it has not turned out that way, and the probable secret is that the Manningtons were the hardest workers. We are not disposed to charge or even intimate fraud, for we have no evidence of anything of the kind, and it is to be hoped that both sides will accept the result in good faith.—Yorkville Enquirer.

"Cured"

Mrs. Jay McGee, of Stephenville, Texas, writes: "For nine (9) years, I suffered with womanly trouble. I had terrible headaches, and pains in my back, etc. It seemed as if I would die, I suffered so. At last, I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and it helped me right away. The full treatment not only helped me, but it cured me."
